

COFFEE IS NOT MY CUP OF
TEA

Howard Bornstein

Singularity Press

©1979, 2009 Howard Bornstein

All Rights Reserved

Second Edition

Sickness is surely one of the great ills of our times.

The tongue makes possible the experience
of speech and taste: often deceptive, mostly bad.

The girl of my dreams is just another tomato in the vegetable juice of life.

He who lives by the pen
is mightier than he who dies by the sword.

A romantic affair is often like chewing bubble gum: the more you chew, the more tedious it gets and the less flavor it seems to have.

A man is greater than some of his parts.

To be cloned out of anxiety is to be beside oneself in fear.

Into each vegetarian's life
a little meat must fall.

There is considerable similarity between man and the anteater. They both spend most of their lives running around looking at the ground and they invariably have their noses in someone else's business.

We are like actors who believe our press agents and critics but never watch our own films.

Life is too short to only live once.

It's often easier to lose one's mind than to lose one's illusions.

Pursuing the sweet smell of success has left many a man without a scent.

To be serious is no laughing matter. To take oneself seriously is a laugh.

I suffer because I am
stupid. If I was smart, I'd still suffer but at least
there would be something in it for me.

Better late than pregnant.

